SPOTLIGHT ON...

NURTURING FAMILIES

Since 2001, the Allen, Logan, Simpson Community Early Childhood Council (CECC) has been granted more than $250,000 to provide training and resource materials for the child care providers in those three counties. This year the council used some of that funding to provide three different trainings, including professional development training on cultural diversity. Forty-three local child care providers received three hours of training, after which 90 percent of participants reported increased knowledge about cultural diversity. All participants received classroom resource kits with arts, humanities and literacy materials reflective of different cultures. The council also provided a parent involvement activity related to cultural diversity by hosting a "Kids on the Block" multiculturalism puppet show for parents and young children in each of the three counties.¹
