SPOTLIGHT ON...

ACCESSING NUTRITIOUS FOOD

Statistics show that about 1,000 Magoffin County children go to bed hungry. While those children may receive nutritious meals at school, there is often a lack of food at home. In an effort to provide them with more nutritious foods at home, Magoffin County Extension organized several programs, including the "Backpack Project." One hundred twelve youth from local schools were identified to participate in the project, which was made possible by regular volunteers and ongoing donations. In exchange for regularly receiving backpacks filled with food, parents of the children were required to participate in our Nutrition Education Program. At the end of the school year, evaluations indicated that 100 percent of participating students attended school more regularly and 88 percent of students looked healthier.¹
