SPOTLIGHT ON...

SECURING FINANCIAL STABILITY

A national study shows that nearly 60 percent of Americans do not have a will. This seems to be the trend in Meade County as well. As a result, Meade County Cooperative Extension partnered with local attorneys, financial planners and a funeral director to offer a series of programs related to estate planning. Topics included how to select a lawyer, the role of a financial planner and preplanning a funeral. The Family and Consumer Sciences agent presented a segment on the importance of keeping financial records and organization. Seventy-two residents participated in the series. In a follow-up survey, 80 percent indicated they now have a record keeping system, 60 percent now have a valid will and 20 percent have formally preplanned their funerals.¹
