MAKING BENEFICIAL LIFESTYLE CHOICES

Childhood obesity, linked to diseases such as diabetes, is a preventable problem. To teach children early in life the benefits of healthy eating, nutrition habits, and physical activity, Boyle County Extension taught Exploring MyPyramid with Professor Popcorn. Of the 800 grade-schoolers, over half learned that hands should be washed after sneezing, after using the bathroom, and before eating. Additionally, 375 participants identified two or more examples from each of the food groups. 150 eat different kinds of vegetables and 180 eat different kinds of fruits most days of the week. 150 report eating whole grains most days. 225 almost always wash their hands before they eat; 150 are more physically active.¹

OUR COMMUNITY
