SPOTLIGHT ON ...

ACCESSING NUTRITIOUS FOOD

Recently, the Bluegrass Region was rated by "Men's Health" magazine as having the poorest health habits in the nation. To address this issue, Nicholas and Robertson County Cooperative Extension Service partnered with Blue Licks State Park to provide a regional farmers market. The market participates in the WIC Farmers Market program, allowing low-income families the opportunity to buy local fruits and vegetables. Family and Consumer Sciences Agents provided samples of fresh produce, offered recipes, and education on preparing local produce. Redeemed WIC vouchers have increased by 2% in 2010 over 2011. Farm businesses directly benefit by selling produce straight from farm to table, while families have an opportunity to increase intake of locally grown fruit and vegetables.
