SPOTLIGHT ON ...

ACCESSING NUTRITIOUS FOODS

The weakened economy prompted an increase in inquiries about gardening and food preservation, so Simpson County Extension Agents planned and conducted three gardening and ten food-preservation workshops over the last three years. A total of 106 people (51 in freezing classes and 65 in canning classes) participated. Evaluations over the three years indicated 71% of the participants had preserved food but only 38% had canned food. All 106 participants indicated that the workshops gave them new information about food preservation. 92% will use the information to freeze food, and 89% will can food. A phone and email survey revealed that participants used the information to preserve an average of $150 worth of food.
