SPOTLIGHT ON ...

DECREASING FALLS IN THE COMMUNITY

Preventing falls, in addition to alleviating fear among seniors, can save money on health care costs, promote better mental, social, and emotional health, and decrease likelihood of nursing home stays. With that in mind, the Greenup County Cooperative Extension Service presented a leader training program called Don't Let Falls Get You Down in seven counties to 69 Homemaker club leaders. Following the program, a survey showed: 100 percent learned the risk factors of falling; 100 percent learned the importance of physical activity in relation to fall prevention; 95 percent learned how to get up properly and which measures to follow if a fall does occur; 92 percent completed the home safety checklist; and 100 percent learned that eyesight problems and medication can influence falls.
