SPOTLIGHT ON ...

FOOD PANTRY COOKING SCHOOL

Anderson County residents struggle with low incomes and high rates of obesity, diabetes, and heart disease. To promote healthy food preparation, the Anderson County FCS and Agriculture Extension Agents had a cooking school at the Open Hands Food Pantry. Two Extension Homemaker volunteers assisted. Prior to the four-session program, 70% of participants had limited food preparation experience and 50% had difficulty following a recipe. Participants received hands-on instruction in the use of basic kitchen equipment, safe knife skills, meal planning, healthy breakfast options, proper measuring techniques, reduced-fat cooking techniques, and food safety guidelines. All participants reported they prepared more food at home, planned some meals ahead of time, and used a grocery list.

Housing has long been recognized as a basic human need. Yet, because housing is often a family's largest expense and largest debt, it can be a stumbling block for many. Safe, lower-cost housing options are often limited for struggling families, and this can lead them into crisis. Family and Consumer Sciences Extension helps people improve home safety, lessen their environmental footprint, and strengthen financial stability. It also helps communities promote healthy lifestyles throughout the lifespan by supporting strong family home environments. Please tell us ways you think we can do more.
