SPOTLIGHT ON ...

STAND UP TO FALLING

As a result of an increasing percentage of elderly residents, Boone County Extension offered "Stand Up to Falling" to help participants live independently longer and experience a better quality of life as they age. Post-session evaluations showed most participants completed a home assessment to determine fall risks. Several made changes in their homes, including installing better night lighting and lighting on stairs. Most increased their physical activity to improve overall strength and flexibility. Half discussed their medications with a health care provider. Fall prevention programs can save an estimated $18,000 to $21,000 in health care costs per person in cases involving a fatality or hospitalization. More than $200,000 in Medicaid claims was potentially saved in Boone County because of this program.

Housing has long been recognized as a basic human need. Yet, because housing is often a family's largest expense and largest debt, it can be a stumbling block for many. Safe, lower-cost housing options are often limited for struggling families, and this can lead them into crisis. Family and Consumer Sciences Extension helps people improve home safety, lessen their environmental footprint, and strengthen financial stability. It also helps communities promote healthy lifestyles throughout the lifespan by supporting strong family home environments. Please tell us ways you think we can do more.
