SPOTLIGHT ON ...

MANNERS THAT WORK

The competition for employment is especially hard for young workers or others new to the workforce. Personal manners and self-presentation may make the difference between being hired for a job or being chosen for a scholarship. Input from the Family Court judge, other local business leaders and the FCS Advisory Council led to the development of a program called "Manners That Work," which was used with drug court participants, YouthBuild Job Readiness, and students. Participants were able to demonstrate a positive handshake, proper table manners, and sort photos into groups that showed proper clothing selection. Five participants became gainfully employed and eight students were selected for leadership/scholarship opportunities or academic honors.

Housing has long been recognized as a basic human need. Yet, because housing is often a family's largest expense and largest debt, it can be a stumbling block for many. Safe, lower-cost housing options are often limited for struggling families, and this can lead them into crisis. Family and Consumer Sciences Extension helps people improve home safety, lessen their environmental footprint, and strengthen financial stability. It also helps communities promote healthy lifestyles throughout the lifespan by supporting strong family home environments. Please tell us ways you think we can do more.
