SPOTLIGHT ON ...

HOME IS WHERE THE HEALTH IS

The Carlisle County Cooperative Extension Office presented "Home is Where the Health Is" to 15 limited-resource families. Pre-tests found that 46% play actively with their children, 40% limit screentime to two hours or less daily, 40% include fruits and vegetables in daily meals, and 53% occasionally turn off TV when eating. Post-tests found that 87% of participants learned three new ways to fix family problems without fighting, 87% learned three active ways to have fun with children, 93% felt better-equipped to help children achieve or maintain a healthy weight, and all said they would serve at least two healthy afterschool snacks that week. Extension homemakers sewed bags and filled them with active play equipment for each family that attended the program.

ousing has long been recognized as a basic human need. Yet, because housing is often a family's largest expense and largest debt, it can be a stumbling block for many. Safe, lower-cost housing options are often limited for struggling families, and this can lead them into crisis. Family and Consumer Sciences Extension helps people improve home safety, lessen their environmental footprint, and strengthen financial stability. It also helps communities promote healthy lifestyles throughout the lifespan by supporting strong family home environments. Please tell us ways you think we can do more.
