NUTRITION EDUCATION PROGRAM

The Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP) in Hardin County teaches limited-resource mothers with young children how to improve the nutritional quality of meals, to safely prepare meals, and boost food-related resources. Of the 56 EFNEP graduate families, 98% showed a positive change in their eating patterns as a result of skills and behaviors taught through EFNEP. According to data from a University of Kentucky Food and Nutrition specialist, each person who received training about foodborne illness prevention saves Kentucky an estimated $1,000 in health care costs. Behavior checklists completed before and after the program showed that 56 Hardin County EFNEP participants reported food safety improvement practices, potentially saving Kentucky $56,000.
Housing has long been recognized as a basic human need. Yet, because housing is often a family's largest expense and largest debt, it can be a stumbling block for many. Safe, lower-cost housing options are often limited for struggling families, and this can lead them into crisis. Family and Consumer Sciences Extension helps people improve home safety, lessen their environmental footprint, and strengthen financial stability. It also helps communities promote healthy lifestyles throughout the lifespan by supporting strong family home environments. Please tell us ways you think we can do more.
