SPOTLIGHT ON ...

RESOURCES FOR FAMILIES

According to the 2010 American Community Survey, 38.1% of families with related children lived in poverty in Martin County between 2006 and 2010. The Martin County Cooperative Extension Service FCS program teamed up with the Family Resource Centers to provide programs to strengthen families; address early literacy; and teach the value of proper nutrition. Programs included: Helping to Control Behavior Problems, Home is Where the Health Is, Blue to You, Keys to Great Parenting, and LEAP. All 262 participants reported learning a skill or gaining knowledge. In a survey, 30% of participants said that they had used a skill learned through the program.

Housing has long been recognized as a basic human need. Yet, because housing is often a family's largest expense and largest debt, it can be a stumbling block for many. Safe, lower-cost housing options are often limited for struggling families, and this can lead them into crisis. Family and Consumer Sciences Extension helps people improve home safety, lessen their environmental footprint, and strengthen financial stability. It also helps communities promote healthy lifestyles throughout the lifespan by supporting strong family home environments. Please tell us ways you think we can do more.
