SPOTLIGHT ON ...

FARMERS MARKET VOUCHERS

The Monroe County Cooperative Extension Service has worked with producers and consumers to increase fruit and vegetable purchase, preparation, consumption and preservation of Kentucky grown and value-added commodities through marketing and educational collaborations. During the summer of 2013 the Senior Farmers Market Nutrition Program allowed 300 low-income senior citizens to purchase fresh fruits and vegetables at the local Farmers market. These vouchers brought $8,400 worth of income to Monroe County producers in 2013. New to the market in 2014 were "Women, Infant and Children" vouchers. Now, more than ever, all segments of the population are being reached through the farmers market.

Housing has long been recognized as a basic human need. Yet, because housing is often a family's largest expense and largest debt, it can be a stumbling block for many. Safe, lower-cost housing options are often limited for struggling families, and this can lead them into crisis. Family and Consumer Sciences Extension helps people improve home safety, lessen their environmental footprint, and strengthen financial stability. It also helps communities promote healthy lifestyles throughout the lifespan by supporting strong family home environments. Please tell us ways you think we can do more.
