SPOTLIGHT ON ...

VOLUNTEER FOOD PROGRAM

Champion Food Volunteer Program was developed to improve the skills and research-based knowledge of volunteers so they could help fight long-term health problems and obesity. Two Owen County leaders were certified and have given hands-on training to adults and youth on basic nutrition, food safety, food handling and preparation, cooking methods and techniques, and food sciences. During one program, volunteers taught all 5th graders to make their lunch; and they also led an after-school program called 4-H Cooking Club. Teachers called it "The best day (program) of the whole school year." One volunteer said the program gave her a greater understanding of the Family and Consumer Sciences programs' role in teaching health and nutrition to improve the quality of life for individuals.

Housing has long been recognized as a basic human need. Yet, because housing is often a family's largest expense and largest debt, it can be a stumbling block for many. Safe, lower-cost housing options are often limited for struggling families, and this can lead them into crisis. Family and Consumer Sciences Extension helps people improve home safety, lessen their environmental footprint, and strengthen financial stability. It also helps communities promote healthy lifestyles throughout the lifespan by supporting strong family home environments. Please tell us ways you think we can do more.
