OUR PEOPLE

SPOTLIGHT ON...

MANAGING HOME ENERGY IMPACTS ENVIRONMENT

To help people understand how daily choices impact the environment, the Lincoln County Extension Office sponsored Living Better Through Home Energy Management. The FCS agent taught the Extension Homemakers leader training program in eight counties. The program's partners included two rural electric cooperatives and the UK Department of Biosystems and Agricultural Engineering. As a result of the program, 88% of participants could name three benefits of home-energy efficiency and conservation; 93% plan to evaluate their home's efficiency; 91% intend to plan more efficient appliance purchases; and 84% plan to turn off lights in unattended rooms.
