SPOTLIGHT ON ...

NURTURING FAMILIES

In Kentucky, households headed by grandparents are rising, with over 57,000 children. An additional 12,294 children live in households headed by other relatives or non-relatives. Due to numerous requests for help, Kenton County Family and Consumer Sciences Agent collaborated with other agencies to conduct ten monthly support group meetings that educate caregivers about parenting techniques, nutrition and wellness, and resource availability. As a result of the support group, the 25 participating families reported in a post-session survey that 85% have assisted other relatives raising children by sharing information learned; 90% have used Extension's resource guide to locate social services; and 53% feel less stress. One grandparent, who is legally adopting her great-grandchild, said the emotional support contributed to her decision.
