SPOTLIGHT ON ...

HEALTHY MEALS ON A BUDGET

According to Eric Schlosser, author of "Fast Food Nation," one-quarter of American adults eat fast food every day, and if adults are eating unhealthy fare, their children are likely doing the same. Unfortunately, most fast food menus are high in fat, sodium, and sugar. As a way to encourage family meal time, the Franklin County Cooperative Extension Service's Family and Consumer Sciences agent and Kentucky State University assistant taught Healthy Meals on a Budget, which incorporated healthy meal planning, food purchasing and preparation. The lesson was shared 150 people. After the lesson, participant comments were positive, with the majority indicating a desire to offer healthier meals to their families and wanting to know how to integrate new ideas.
