SPOTLIGHT ON ...

PROMOTING FRUIT AND VEGETABLE CONSUMPTION

The Hart County Farmers Market is a valuable resource for providing access to fresh fruits and vegetables. The local Chamber of Commerce director and Hart County Cooperative Extension Service's Family and Consumer Sciences agent have worked closely with market leaders to prepare local producers to maximize sales through Extension programs. Eleven families have completed the micro-processing training; eight other families have completed home-based processing training. This farm-grown, value-added process has allowed families to double and triple profits on products. Completion of GAP, best practice food safety training, has prepared producers to legally share samples of food products with potential customers. Extension is successfully emphasizing eating local, trying new foods, improving food safety, increasing consumption of fruits and vegetables, and increasing farm income.
